1. Introduction

In today's technological era, social media is a must for an organization to stay competitive in the market. Social Media is a tool to manage relationships with customers and keep them closer. The use of social media marketing is a strong factor in developing a CRM strategy (Saura et al., 2019). CRM considers the client the center of the business and orientates the company's marketing policy to benefit from the use of social media, increase sales and profitability, create advertisements, acquire new customers, retain them and make them loyal. Organizations must adapt to the advent of social media that CRM plays a major role in increasing market share, improving productivity, superior employee morale, and increasing employee satisfaction (Gundlach & Wilkie, 2009).

Social media is growing rapidly and continuously. An organization with a social CRM system will build better relationships with customers, grow and gain trust and confidence (Saura et al., 2019). Customers exchange ideas through social networks and the information expressed should be used by organizations to create products and services that satisfy clients' needs better and generate profits for the company. In a social world, companies have to move fast and share knowledge more than ever. Organizations must also connect with customers according to their habits that increasingly connect businesses to social networks. Clients expect to get quality, customized services, according to their demands. These are compelling reasons why companies should embrace emerging social CRM as part of their current and future strategies. The major influence of social media in consumer behavior is, undoubtedly, changing the face of modern marketing strategies and becoming one of the most powerful marketing tools (Agnihotri et al., 2016).

PKM aims to analyze how social media supports the development of Customer Relationship Management (CRM) as a marketing strategy in increasing customer loyalty according to Gartner (2003), 25% of companies that adopt CRM will expand their customer relationship centers to include social media and other online communities. It is imperative that organizations show that they are listening to the voices of their clients. Therefore, companies are almost obliged to implement SCRM in their marketing strategies, due to the fact that it is a powerful marketing tool that provides useful client experience insights, acknowledges their dissatisfaction, and receives their positive feedback and recommendations (Hargreaves et al., 2018). This information gives organizations the opportunity to rethink or improve their marketing strategies to meet the needs of their customers.

The partner who is the place of activity is a Batik creative product business. From the results of observations made to partners about the use of social media in building social customer relationships can help partners improve sustainable social relationships with customers. However, there are still major partner problems in building SCRM. This has an effect on relationships with customers. To maintain business survival and maintain relationships with existing customers, the PKM Untar Team feels the need to transfer knowledge to partners. For this reason, the main problem to be solved is how to optimize partners' knowledge about social media and SCRM.

3.1. Results

3.1.1. Partner's Business Profile

The science and technology model delivered to partners includes a social media strategy in contrast to SCRM. Organizations can measure marketing and communication campaigns using social CRM, generating statistics on likes and dislikes. Choosing SCRM is undoubtedly a long-term commitment. SCRM is a different approach that monitors social networks to get an ever-increasing level of client interaction and also identifies in a more efficient way the opportunities/prospects that come through these channels. Social CRM is a CRM that integrates Social Media accounts of an organization and automates interactions with fans, followers, clients, likes, etc. In a structured way, the company knows what its market thinks of their products and services, can plan or schedule responses, can forward information to the right people, etc.

In my opinion, SCRM does not replace classic CRM, it is rather an extension of the old one, which tries to get closer to clients through blogs, forums, social networks, search engines, sharing sites, etc. Usually organizations understand that social media strategy is a marketing tool. Social media is the fastest and most efficient method to distribute information, promote products and services and enlarge the number of potential customers. Marketing on social networks represents the next step that every organization should take.

SCRM supports customer management strategies and can result in increased sales with decreased costs for the organization. Companies spend a lot of money on marketing campaigns looking for increased profitability. The main objective of Social CRM is helping organizations understand the importance of using such strategies:

- a. Building knowledge and understanding.
- b. Keeping customers.
- c. Attracting prospects.
- d. Winning new customers.
- e. Developing customer value.
- f. Obtaining information about competitors.

The above objectives are closely related to each other and help organizations to expand their activities and become globally recognized and gain brand awareness. It is said that the best way to promote your company is "word of mouth", through SCRM customers can be involved in caring and sharing the company's desired message.
