3. Satu PTDN hanya dapat menjadi penyelenggara untuk satu pertemuan saja
4. Penentuan penyelenggara pertemuan akan ditentukan oleh tim Subpokja IISMA
5. PTDN lainnya dapat memilih untuk mengikuti pertemuan yang diinginkan, dan PTDN tuan rumah memberikan fasilitas untuk dapat berdiskusi bersama dengan PTLN tujuan
6. Tim Subpokja IISMA menghubungkan PTDN tuan rumah pertemuan dengan PTLN tujuan untuk menyepakati waktu pertemuan melalui email

10. Durasi IISMA Partnership Week maksimal dua minggu (minggu akhir Januari s.d. minggu awal Februari 2022)

Templat Laporan Hasil Pertemuan Kerjasama:

PTDN penyelenggara pertemuan : Universitas Tarumanagara - Jakarta
PTLN : Newcastle University, United Kingdom
Waktu pelaksanaan : 16.00 – 17.45 WIB
Peserta : Perwakilan PTDN (60 orang, 40 PTDN)
Potensi Kegiatan Kerjasama :

Newcastle University (NCU) merupakan anggota dalam Russell Group yang bukan hanya fokus pada pengajaran tetapi juga penelitian. NCU memiliki 3 Fakultas. NCU memiliki kekuatan riset dalam bidang “Ageing, Cities, Culture and Creative Arts, One Planet, and Data” Salah satu fokus dalam riset NCU adalah dalam mendukung UN Sustainable Development Goals. NCU memiliki fokus tersebut agar mahasiswanya tersebut dapat membagi pengalaman serta merasakan secara langsung apa yang perlu dilakukan untuk mencapai fokus tersebut. Saat ini NCU memiliki 20 kerja sama aktif di Asia Tenggara. Semoga dalam masa depan, NCU dapat bekerja sama dalam bagian program seperti IISMA maupun yang lainnya.

Diskusi Potensi Kerja Sama PTDN dan NCU:

Potensi kerja sama bisa dalam bidang akademis (pengajaran) maupun topik penelitian, exchange partnership, workshop partnership (internship), online guest lecturer, virtual collaboration in teaching, joint supervision for thesis, dual degree antara Fakultas Kedokteran di PTDN dan FK di NCU, dan dapat dituangkan dalam MoU sebagai perjanjian antar kedua belah pihak.

Setelah lulus seleksi IISMA dengan salah satu syarat adalah skor bahasa Inggris, Awardee di NCU dapat mengambil les Bahasa Inggris gratis yang disediakan oleh NCU.

Kerja sama di bidang apapun biasanya sudah ada tetapi seandainya ingin dimulai kerja sama bisa menghubungi Miss Andrea (Lesley Jackson, our International Relations Manager International Office for Asia would be the best point of contact and her email address is: lesley.jackson@newcastle.ac.uk). Seandainya terdapat MoU antara UNTAR ke NCU, maka newcastle mendapatkan funding dari pemerintah UK untuk international relationship.

IISMA ke NCU dibuka menjadi 20 mahasiswa yang dibuka tahun 2022 jika disetujui.

QnA

- Hugeng : I think I want to ask you about the collaboration possibilities between Untar and Newcastle University, because until now, as I know that there is no MoU between us, what can you suggest that we want to start a collaboration with Newcastle University

Danielle : Thank you Hugeng, I think would any partnership opportunity or potential collaboration between ourself and other university, which is need to have a starting point as i mention in that last slide whether that is an academic link with the university or perhaps one of our researcher that professor McGowan told about and what Untar is actively working and where you could see potential opportunities for collaboration. As I mentioned briefly we got many different types of partnership agreement available that we currently operated with in southeast asian around the world so that can be more formal agreements and things like exchange agreement or agreement partnerships or if you say an MoU which is more a willingness further to your institution to collaborate, so I think put my contact the details on that final slide and I'm happy to share those as well as those my colleagues in our relationship and partnerships team and they are really the point of contact for any discussion or engagement around the partnership opportunities.

- Arisman : One big problem of my students to visit or take this program is english. So I don't know much about the IISMA program, is that any support before coming to join the IISMA program or to the Newcastle University in terms of the language. And the second question is if we would like to make a relationship, do we need to contact you first as an international student officer or we make a relationship with a department that we would like to collaborate with it.

Danielle : in terms of english language we agree to participate with IISMA, we agreed with a minimum language requirement and the all student must need to participate on this program, and which would it be the equivalent an IELTS 6.5 or 5.5 in the subskills. We were able to get agreement this year to accepts additional test at duolingo, and TOEFL, there is number of different qualifications that students can take, so we face particularly struggle with a certain type of test there are other options available to them. One thing I would say is from the time the student applies to take part in IISMA till the time their apply to the university eventually accepted, there is time for them to continue work on their english skills and developing those skills, so that they are prepared when they arrive to the university, there is number of resources that we can recommend and the student can access online and that can support students in that is specifically aim students who are going to be studying in the UK or in the english speaking institution. Once student are actually here at Newcastle university, there's a vast wealth of support and they can use to help them with their english that actually number of our asian students from 2021 took advantage of, so we have something called the university wide english language program which is basically free english language tuition and writing tuition to any of our current registered students so they get those classes alongside the academic studies and there's no sort of additional charge or requirement for them to participate in those, and they're really designed to help students succeed in their studies and get used to the kinds of academic language and terminology in style of writing that we use particulate in Newcastle University. So that is definitely a resource that I would actively encourage students to use and to become involved with because that can really help them. Not only just building their confidence. But also more quickly adapt to the learning style in the UK. So I hope that answers your question. I think there are the minimum requirements that are set out at the initial an application point. That are set by our self and the ministry and so students would need to meet that. But anything beyond that, any Improvement beyond that, we can absolutely continue to support them with that. And then the second question about the best way to initiate partnerships. I think either option is fine. Its just depends on what your relationship with the university is. If you don't have existing links with a particular school or faculty and then it may make sense to get in touch with the central of international relation and partnerships team first. However, if you do have those ties or those existing links through research or something else, maybe that you want to reach out to the school first directly.

Andrea : So we have very different partnerships in different ways. Some people work directly with the schools and with individuals that they maybe known already have really strong relationships with and all the connecting kind of area of interest that they like to work on. If you don't have any of those links, at the moment and you would like to kind of start that dialogue and to see if there's any areas of crossover, then we can, you know, we can facilitate that. So feel free and we can give you our contact details. And in this I can drop them in the chat with second but feel free to kind of contact our team and we can maybe kind of facilitate some of those discussions. but feel free to kind of contact our team and we can maybe kind of facilitate some of those discussions. feel free to kind of contact our team and we can maybe kind of facilitate some of those discussions.

Chat : Lesley Jackson, our International Relations Manager International Office for Asia would be your best point of contact and her email address is:

lesley.jackson@newcastle.ac.uk

- Danielle : Sorry, I was just going to add. We've now been joined by one of our academic colleagues, Dr. Stevin Pramana, who may want to talk a little bit about the UK CIS research consortium and know they're sort of areas, particularly Steven works in chemical engineering. Any sort of further thoughts that you might like to add Stevin about our work in Indonesian and how we might continue to build these partnerships in these relationships.

Stevin Pramana : Thank you very much, Danielle. Let me just greet the professors and all the colleagues in Indonesia, selamat sore Bapak Ibu, I'm Stevin, at the moment I'm a lecturer in chemical engineering at Newcastle University. I joined the university in 2017. So at the moment, in terms of the link with the Indonesian institution, I have a strong link with Universitas Padjadjaran. So we just had the MoU signed. So basically that's a starting point for us to apply for Newton fund. That's one of the UK basically, International funding opportunity. So we did apply that with Professor Martin and Professor Amel before. So, as Danielle mentioned before, in terms of building a MoU, or other strategic partnership. It can do pretty much quite flexibly you can go through via the international office, or you can directly contact any of the academic staff members, lecturers, professors just to engage directly in terms of trying to set up a research exchange collaboration or opportunities. And in terms of the opportunity for us as consortium of the UK University in the UK CIS , we are not trying to kind of build the stronger partnership with the UK CIS. I think at the moment the UK universities the join the consortiums are only economists three or four and we're trying to kind of build some understanding in terms of the MoU between the four of us of the universities in the UK as well as universities back in Indonesia. Yeah, if you have any further questions, relating to the research, at the moment, my research is in the energy conversion in fuel cell batteries, and I believe Indonesia now is putting a lot of efforts in kind of advancing the battery technologies or the electric vehicle, electric battery more to a revolution. And I think UK CIS is actually part of the collaborator in that particular project as well.

- Danille : I've just sense a couple of questions that came in the chat, so it's great to hear that students are interested in attending Newcastle through IISMA. We've submitted our best to be a whole student versity for 2022, and we're just awaiting till final out come from the Ministry of Education. We're actually hoping to increase the number of places at Newcastle up to about 20 students so we can have a bigger call hold for this year. And what the best advice I could give students who wanting to participate in this program and we're looking at the different universities. There's a lot of great institutions. Thankfully, as part of this scheme is to maybe compare the different courses or modules, that each University is offering to find something that is particularly interesting to them, that they'd like to explore further, as well as thinking about the destination, of course, universities in the UK will be very different to European universities versus universities in the US. So just think about what type of student experience they might wants, and I am always happy to chat with any prospective students that are interested in Newcastle, but aren't quite sure where they want to apply to through IISMA. So I've put my contact details in there as well. And should you get any questions from your students, we are more than happy to answer those.

- Reiny : Great to hear that it's not that complicated to get a collaboration with you. With the Newcastle University. And I really hope that you can facilitate us to start the collaboration. As you mentioned before, that we need to have a start-up like a research or something like that. So we really hope that. I'm going to email you and I really hope that you can facilitate us, still look for the researchers that are looking for to start the collaboration. you can facilitate us, still look for the researchers that are looking for to start the collaboration.

Danielle : Yes, absolutely. I think we can definitely help make those connections. And those links between our academic staff and researchers and your universities. The other thing to mention is obviously we've not been able to travel much over the past two years for in pre-covid times. We would spend quite a bit of time actually traveling out to the region and spending time in Indonesia and other neighboring countries. So it could be that once things start to open up again, and I'm actually able to be in Indonesia, that we could coordinate some campus visits or some in-person meetings because I think that's a really good way to facilitate these discussions as well as actually being able to meet in person and sort of see your operations and your campuses. So that's something else I can keep you updated on. And when we are able to start visiting again, whether that's myself or my colleagues or other delegates of staff.

- Suryani Halim : I would like to ask whether in a Newcastle University would interesting to our choir program. We try to set up an international choir competition, online of course, I think will be due on June or July. Do you think Newcastle University would like have interest on that?

Danielle : I think that sounds really interesting and as someone who likes to sing, but maybe isn't the best. A choir competition sounds really interesting. We do have a music department and there's a number of different choirs and orchestras, and musical groups, and that kind of operates, or we'd be happy to put you in contact with our department of music, and to see if they would be interested in participating in something like that, but it sounds very interesting. And if you want to put your contact details in the chat box, I can connect with you to get some further information from you.

- Hugeng : I've seen from the presentation from Professor Philip that you have also the research in the cities because we also have the study program, master study program and also bachelors study program for the Urban Development. I think we can connect for the to study programs departments

Danielle : yes, definitely. Urban Development and Urban planning are very big sort of themes for us both in our research and our teaching. So it could be, as you said that, there's some collaboration there and I'm happy to share the slides that we presented today with everyone. And hopefully Hugeng, you can help us facilitate that in reaching everyone. What we can circulate those out and they do have my contact details on there. I might just add my contact details for our International relations and partnerships team as well. And so you've got the relevant people that you need to follow up with their and it would be great to hear from those of you who are interested and we can start to have these more meaningful conversations about what these opportunities might be.

- Amalia : So, I have a question here from my colleague, from medical school. If I'm not mistaken, I know that Newcastle has a dual degree with Universitas Indonesia in medical school, right? So we are looking for any possibility to make a dual degree in medical school also. So is there any specific requirement to establish that program?

Danielle : We do have an existing partnership agreement with Universitas Indonesia where by students who are studying a medical degree in their International class will come to Newcastle for a year to undertake a masters of research program in our faculty of medical sciences. So that's a fairly long standing relationship that we've had for a number of years that were sort of continuing to develop and also looking at dental students coming to do something similar. I think one of the main components of that agreement is those students, a middle level in their studies in Indonesia, where they're equipped to come and do a master's degree. So, because they're studying medicine, and I believe they're either after the third or fourth year, they then come over to Newcastle. So they've got the right prerequisites, if you will to come and do the immersed program. So, that is definitely one of the things that we would look at for any new potential agreement is the content of the courses that the students are studying at their home university in Indonesia, as well as what they had planned to study at Newcastle before returning back home, but that's something it. Can I just ask is it specifically for medical and subjects and students that you'd be looking to set up this type of agreement or other other disciplines, or subject areas that you'd be considering.

Amalia : we already have dual degree program in the faculty of economy and business, if I'm not mistaken. So we are trying to build more dual degree with other faculties and one faculty that really eager to make the dual degree is Medical School.

Danielle : Yeah. I think that's something that we can definitely discuss further and kind of talk more about the requirements of that and what the setup for our existing partnership with you I looks like and whether there's any potential to develop something similar or using different programs. At Newcastle, to complement the medical degrees at your university. So happy if you want to get in touch with us directly after this, and we can follow up on that discussion.

- Yusnita : Very awesome presentation. So I have five proposed partnerships, act of partnership. For example is for the guest lecture, is it possible? Because as a Dr. Arisman just said, the problem for our student is English. So I think maybe we can get the student to get guest lecture first so they're will be familiar with english, and we can step by step to get another type of partnership. Then, another type of partnership that I will purpose also for the co-supervisor undergraduate student, is it possible for the second supervisor, then to do research in Indonesia also in Newcastle?

Danielle : Yeah, I don't know, Stevin, you could maybe a comment on that. But obviously we do have sort of agreements in place where we have guest lecture relationships as well as joint supervisor, most of our joint supervision partnerships of a PhD or postgraduate study, but I'm not sure whether we do that for undergraduate, but I could be wrong. I don't know, Stevin, if you could comment on that any further.

Stevin Pramana : Yeah, for the guest lecture, or conducted workshop. I've done quite a few times, especially with the University of Indonesia in the FMIPA and the physics department. Also with the UNY, Universitas Negeri Yogyakarta and a few other universities. So for the guest lecture, I don't think there's should be problem. Then in terms of the supervision, I'm not too sure particularly, but I've been involved in examining as the external examiner for some of the Indonesian PhD candidate.

Danielle :I think it's something we could have said that would be open to, you know, taking these discussions further, even if it's not something that we currently already do, if you think there's an opportunity and to set up an agreement where that would be in place then we're happy to explore that and see how that might work in practice.

Yusnita : Yeah, because of the MoU it will take quite some times. So is it possible that we could initiate the activity before the agreement for the side agreement from our university?

Danielle : Yes, absolutely, we often and we'll do that with institutions while we're already working collaboratively before. There's a formal MoU and MoA in place. So, absolutely, we understand that. Sometimes those things do take quite a bit of time, and we might want to start working on that relationship before the official, you know, papers assigned. So definitely, there doesn't necessarily need to be an MoU in place for us to begin working on agreements like that.

- Danielle : And I'm just gonna to pop Stevin's email in the chat

Stevin : I just put a link in the chat, so for those of you, especially for the early career lecturers, early career research scientist who want to possibly have some first month or second month of you and remember what is maximum duration for this scheme, but there is a scheme here for the non-UK scientist to come over to the UK to do some research collaboration with any of the UK universities is supported or funded by the Royal Society. So do make the opportunity. If let's say any of you want to visit or come to the UK for doing some research here.

- Leo : I would like to ask about the possibility to make collaboration online class for school of computing and school of engineering. Because we also have these faculty in our university. I would like to ask about the possibility to make collaboration online class for school of computing and school of engineering. Because we also have these faculty in our university.

Danielle : Thank you Leo, and that's a really good point. And it's not something, we've really touch down up until this point and is the idea of virtual collaboration, what we can be doing online or digitally with one another. We do have a dedicated and virtual sort of collaboration coordinator in our global opportunities team. So again, that someone I can put you in contact with and sort of give her a heads-up about what we've what we've discussed today, but that is actually, I think one of the ways where we will continue to have Partnerships and work with new institutions because not necessarily having that physical travel between countries. It has, encouraged us to do a lot more virtually. So absolutely, and of course, computer science and engineering kind of primary fields and subjects where we do a lot of that anyway. Well, there's definitely potential for us to do more. So I'd be happy to follow up with my colleague on that and put you in contact with the right person to discuss what those opportunities might be.

- Hugeng : I think for the time today that pandemic covid is still there. An online class, we can initiate for the collaboration. Maybe only one or two session for its lecture. Is it possible Danielle?

Danielle : Yeah, I think even covid not outstanding and as things continue to improve that there's definitely a space for us to do more virtual collaboration. I think one of the challenges we've sometimes faces with time zone differences if you're wanting to do things in a live setting and making that work, but that's not to say that there's not potential and for us to explore that and to do more further whether it's a series of classes or as one-off, or one or two, as you've said, and there's a lot of development going on in this area and it and the universities really quite invested in our virtual collaboration and what we do digitally. So I definitely think that is one of the areas where we will be extremely willing to discuss and collaborate, what we can do.

- Galih : I'd really like to ask a questions. Because I do believe that all the things and that all the questions that you got and brings to this meeting is actually really good and enough for me to put the informations and let this information spread in the Telkom University, but I would like to tell you that Telkom University now has a similar research from like what Mr. Stevin Pramana are doing right now that we are also have researching electric vehicles. I wish that I could really bridging Mr. Stevin into our lectures, and also researches in electric vehicles. Second, we actually have a biomedic majors. And it's a new majors in Telkom University and I do believe that we are like now, we really doing hardway to actually build the biometric majors. I wish that in the future Newcastle University could actually help us to really build our biomedic majors into some great majors like what Newcastle university has done right now. Unfortunately, we don't have any MoU or actually MoA to start all the agreements. I would like to ask something that is it okay, if we're doing something without MoU, or we could doing it such a parallel while we're doing in the process, we're doing all the projects together.

Danielle : I don't know if Andrea, you might want to comment on this. It's my understanding that we don't necessarily need to have an MoU or MOA in place to start working together, and to start collaborating. I think we would ultimately want to be working towards that and sort of navigating, how MoU or MoA might look between our institutions, but we work with many universities where we don't necessarily have that in place. Andrea. Is there anything that you wanted to add on that?

Andrea: Yeah. That's absolutely correct. So, we yeah, we can work together. Head of any agreements and I think that's often how it begins anyway, to be honest. I think that always works and I stand yell said then if asked that progresses and as we continue to work together more than we want to work towards that but it's not a requirement at all.

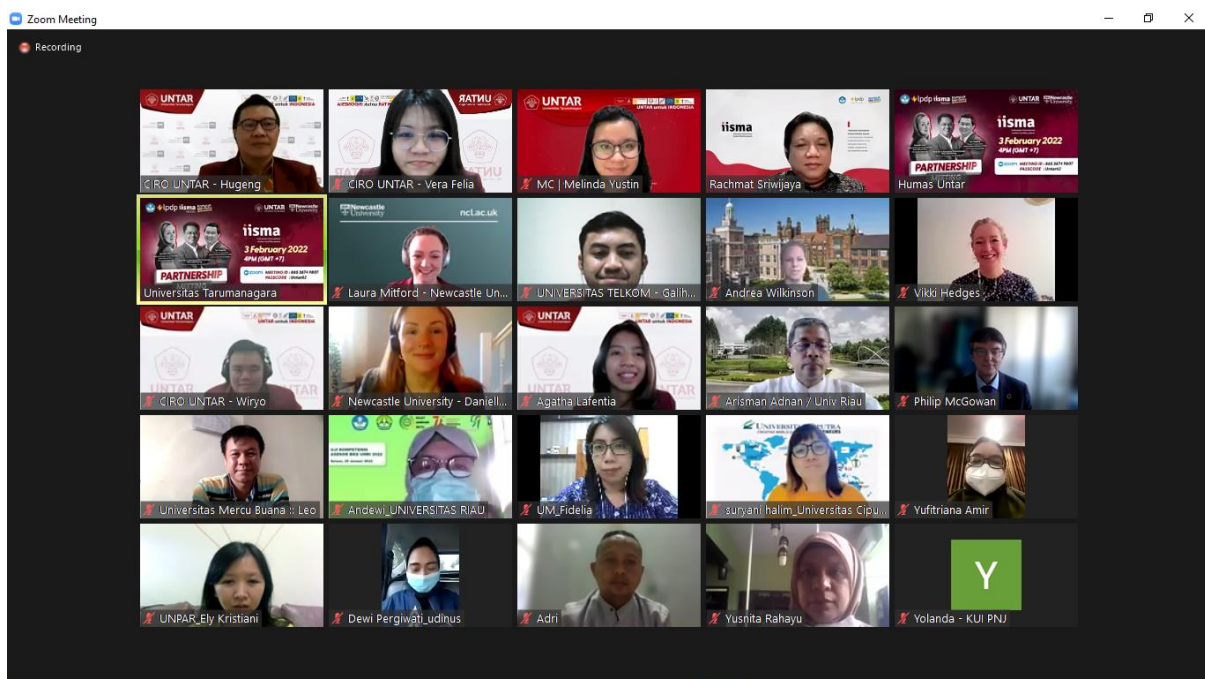

Danielle: I think a lot of these collaborations begin quite organically and through links that our academic staff might have an opportunities like this to, you know, to be able to talk to so many great universities. So yeah, I don't see that as being a barrier to start in any collaborations or work together. And then Stevin, I don't know if that you had anything to add on the electric vehicles, just that there's obviously some overlap there with the work that we're doing, at Newcastle.

Stevin: Yeah, definitely. There's an overlap with the, with the research activities that we've been doing here in the Newcastle, especially in the discipline of the electrical and electronic engineering. Where as for me, myself, I'm focusing mainly on the battery in terms of this the electrochemical cell itself, or the fuel cell, or the electrolysis, or even the solar cell. So it's really in the kind of the electrochemistry part of the system, but not the assembly of the whole body entire system. And I would like to actually kind of point another opportunity as well. So beyond the collaboration with Newcastle because the UK also has lots of kind of shared facilities. For example, those who are coming from the MIPA, for example, those who want to access the big facilities like synchrotron all this big x, ray neutron facilities, or even the high-resolution electron microscopy, all this scanning tempt. We do have kind of a strong collaboration with them so we can actually put the proposal to just apply for some beam time together. Then we can we can definitely work on some research projects together like some beam time and hopefully if they award some beam time then either you can come here you to experiment together or you can actually to send the samples over then we can we can basically one and all those measurements.

- Hugeng: I think it's already enough for our session. Because of the time limitations, I think we can close our session, please fill in the attendee list for my colleagues from Indonesia. And also, if you have proposal, I can direct forward the proporsal to Danielle so that Danielle can follow up your proposal. I think it is very intersting from our discussion. But because of our time limitation, it's not closed that we can work together in the next future. Yeah. We have also already exchanged the contact. I think, for the intensive collaboration opportunities we can contact each other. Thank you very much for the team from Newcastle University, Danielle, Laura, Andrea and Professor Phillip, Stevin Pramana, and for the team, and also I would like to thank very much to Head of IISMA Program, the Dr. Rachmat Sriwijaya, and also all colleague from the universities in Indonesia, thank you for the good relationship between Untar and your university. I think we can close this section. Thank you very much. We'll see you later.

Dear Pak Hugeng,

Greetings from Newcastle in the UK! I am delighted to have the opportunity to work with Universitas Tarumanegara to host this partnership meeting with Indonesian universities.

Do you have a preferred date and time to conduct this session next week? We have availability on most days so I'm happy to be as flexible as possible. Could you perhaps send me a few suggested time slots and we can work out what will be the most convenient?

I look forward to hearing from you.

Best wishes,

Danielle

Dear Hugeng,

Thank you for your response – can I propose Thursday 3rd February at 9am as you suggested?

It would be useful to agree what the format for this session should be, so that we can get the most out of the event. I'm working with my colleagues in our international relations and partnerships team and we thought it may be useful for us to deliver a brief presentation on our University, our research strengths and the types of partnership agreement we currently have in place.

Do we have any idea how many representatives from other Indonesian universities may be present for this? Depending on the number of attendees we may then have the opportunity to start discussing potential partner opportunities and have a brief Q&A.

I look forward to hearing your thoughts on this and we're happy to work collaboratively with you.

Best wishes,

Danielle

Dear Hugeng,

Great that all sounds good to me and the timings are fine. Could I just check a few things with you:

1. Speech by head of IISMA programme – can I just check this is the head of the programme in Indonesia?
2. Testimony from awardee – would it be possible to ask one of our Newcastle awardees to present here too? I'm still in contact with our 2021 cohort so could ask one of them to join and talk briefly about their experience at our University?
3. Would your preferred platform for the session be zoom? Will you set this up or would you like me to?

I'm working on coordinating our representatives here at Newcastle and will be in touch shortly to confirm the name/roles of those who will be joining me for this session. If you need anything further from me please let me know.

Dear Danielle,

Many thanks for your email. I will try to answer your questions:

1. Speech by head of IISMA programme – can I just check this is the head of the programme in Indonesia?
Yes. Dr. Eng. Ir. Rachmat Sriwijaya is the Head of IISMA Program from Ministry of Education, Culture, Research and Technology. He will give a short speech accordingly.
2. Testimony from awardee – would it be possible to ask one of our Newcastle awardees to present here too?
You are welcome to do so. First, we will allow an awardee from our university that studied at the University of Glasgow, and then after the MC gives the chance for your session, you can begin with the testimony from an awardee studied at New Castle University.
3. We will provide you with the Zoom link later today.

Please let me know if you have any questions and things to discuss.

Thank you.

Hugeng

Dear Hugeng,

Great thank you or clarifying this.

I have to request a minor change to the programme, I this can be accommodated:

09.30am Newcastle University (15 minute presentation by myself on IISMA and broader work in Indonesia, about our University)

09.45am Q&A/discussion

10.00am Newcastle University (10-15 minute presentation from Philip McGowan, Dean of Engagement& Internationalisation, Faculty of Science, Agriculture &

Engineering to talk about our global strategy and research strengths

10.15am Q&A/Discussion and conclusion

I hope this is acceptable – Phil McGowan is one of our global Deans and he would only be available to join us at this time, hence the need to adjust slightly but still leaving enough time for Q&A.

Please can you confirm if this is okay from your point of view?

Will await the zoom link from you shortly.
