Dear Dr. Fuk Jin Oey,

As the Editor for Int. J. of Structural Engineering, I kindly invite you to review this submission and assess its quality and suitability for publication:

"Does Concrete Modular System add value in Residential Buildings – Case study and Qualitative Evaluation"

The deadline for completion of the review is 08-Dec-2022.

You can view the article abstract here to check it is within your subject area:

The concept of modularity has been widely accepted in production environment. However, its adoption in the construction sector is still limited. The research aims to address what are the main (sub) challenges in adopting concrete modularity concept in residential housing. The study collected possible challenges from previous studies, and asked expert respondents to perform AHP_pair wise comparison. It also analysed the cost and time implication for modular concrete construction using parameters from two case project of a 2_storey housing. The results shown the "High upfront investment cost", "Lack of interest from consumers", "No/Lack of guidelines and regulation in design", "Lack of suppliers/products", and "Complexity to integrate with onsite structure" as the top five sub_challenges. From the project case 4% cost increase and 25% time saving can be expected from modular concrete adoption to a 2_storey housing project.

I would be grateful if you could let me know now if you are able to assist with this peer review.
